Part I

Each of these concepts is essential and indispensable.

The government should delegate the duty of maintaining cleanliness of streets and public places to the relevant municipal bodies.

The right to abortion exists. However, in our country women has limited version of this right. Often she depends on her husband even from perspective of the fulfilment of the above-mentioned right.

From the perspective of human values every country should open borders for migrants. But one should take into consideration that as a result of such policy the country will allow to enter to its territory new and different traditions, cultures, groups of people and new communities which have strongly discrepant from average citizen of this country patterns of behavior. However, I have to stipulate here, that I support national and cultural diversity of the country, because mono-ethnic countries in many cases are not well developed. Diversity boosts the development of the country. Notwithstanding of all mentioned statements, this topic is in a very slippery zone. Azerbaijan has its own serious problems and acceptance of migrants may exacerbate the situation.

The question on the right of ethnic minorities to get education in their native languages in regards of Azerbaijan isn't topic for debates. As far as I know there are some schools which organize their system of education in the languages of minority groups or at least provide courses on these languages. However, the problem is with the Universities. To organize education in the language of minority group at the Uni level is inexpedient. Overall, the issue itself can ensue dangers for the territorial integrity of Azerbaijan. Territorial integrity of the country is the most important thing.

Cultural and ethnic diversity of the country definitely has some positive aspects for the development of the country. Although, if there are elements of chauvinism in society then this issue can engender serious threats.

State and economy/individual and society – these two blocks of concepts are very interdependent, and one should not juxtapose them. They are on parallels and they should evolve on parallels. Citizens, especially women, should be engaged into the management of state economy and policy-formation process. Moreover, the government should support small businesses in the country, the owners of small businesses are confronting with serious problems now.

Part II

I am a person who has Turkic roots, I am Azerbaijani. I am a person who sees her and her child's present and future closely connected with this country. I am an eastern woman who wants to preserve eastern traditions in our society (except some of them). I am a person who is different from an average citizen because I fully grasped my duties and responsibilities which I have to fulfil for the well-being of my country.

From ideological point of view religion is the simplest form of addiction. This aspect one can easily witness in the recruiting for and activity of ISIS. Religion and state should be separated.

Nation is my conscious. Nation is my spirit. I don't have any complex of national inferiority. I belong to a great nation.

There are no borders for me, especially if I know languages.

I find social networks very positive. However, when they are used for negative purposes the impact on people can be very negative as well. I have a lot of case which are connected with violation of women's rights which were committed via social networks. I am against limiting of access or blocking social media in the country. Social media is ineluctable part of our reality.

The consequences of the restoration of historical borders depend on persons who realize this process and on the aims pursued by them.

Part III

Interference of other countries into the conflict is the barrier for resolving the Nagorno-Karabakh problem. As a nation, it is not a big deal, to find solution to this problem. But as state in the international arena there a lot of conflicting interests between which we have to balance.

The guilty are warmongers, individuals who use war for augmenting their profits and wealth.

Plenty of efforts have been being put to resolve this conflict. A lot of negotiations are being carried out. Activity of diaspora and activity in social media have been significantly increased. Sometimes one person, one woman can resolve the conflict. The history can give us evidences to backup this statement. However, in this stage negotiations are futile and don't bring and development in the settling of this problem.

It is a matter of time to restore good relationships between two nations. But I don't think that we should forget all these atrocities which were perpetuated towards us.

Azerbaijan doesn't have any friend except itself. And each from the list is a danger for us. However, Azerbaijan should be active part of world community and actively be engaged in all international events and processes.

Metaphysically Nagorno-Karabakh doesn't belong to anyone. Everyone dies in the end. But as a territory it belongs to Azerbaijan according to all historical evidences and facts.

There is no perfect and successful sample of conflict resolution. Negotiation processes are used just for soothing the process of nations to get accustomed to the present situation. I don't want any war. I want to believe that all parts of the conflict are mature and civilized enough for resolving this conflict by peaceful means. However, there are a lot of interferences in the process from outside which make the resolution of the conflict impossible.
